

OUR UNIVERSITIES OF MASS DESTRUCTION

"The University of California's system wide finances are incredibly entangled with weapons manufacturers : General Dynamics with a University of California investment of $21,471,120, Northrop Grumman for $16,125,200, Raytheon for $16,818,200, TRW for $8,327,650, and Lockheed Martin for a staggering $33,046,370." The University of California is now in the position of managing, developing, proliferating, investing in, and profiting from Weapons of Mass Destruction. The fact that the University of California investments of $33,046,370 in Lockheed Martin Marietta (70% owned by Carlyle which is 5.2% owned by the State of California employee pension fund), and $21,471,120 in General Dynamics - one of the two biggest US manufacturers of DU weaponry which has been sold to 29 countries, make the University of California complicit in war crimes. Within California there are eight FFRDCs (Federally Funded Research and Development Centers), four of which are administrated by Universities. Two of these are significantly militarized research centers, they are: The Lawrence Livermore National Lab managed by the University of California, and the Jet Propulsion Lab at the California Institute of Technology. The UC also manages the Los Alamos National Lab in New Mexico, which when paired with LLNL completes the nation's two nuclear weapons labs managed by the UC and funded by the Department of Energy. (source : www.fiatpax.net/researchcenters.html) the University of California (UC) is planning a "Bioweapons Level 4" (BSL-4) laboratory at UC Davis for development of biological weapons. The most dangerous infectious diseases in the world like ebola virus, tularemia, hemorrhagic fever virus, and Coxiella burnetti will be developed as bioweapons.

Robert Dynes connections with the nuclear weapons complex are extensive. According to today's Chronicle, Robert Dynes has served as a consultant to the UC President's Council on the National Labs, and a member of the UC's five person Board of Oversight for the Los Alamos National Laboratory. As Chancellor of UC San Diego, Robert Dynes headed one of the more militarize campus within the UC System. UCSD annually conducts tens of millions of dollars in contracted basic research for the Department of Defense and its sub-agencies. http://www.fiatpax.net/dynes.html

Operation Condor

Chile, September 1970: the CIA, with the collaboration of International Telephone & Telegraph (ITT) and Pepsi-Cola, tried, unsuccessfully, to mount a military coup in order to prevent the favored, left-wing candidate Salvador Allende from winning the presidential election. They planned this coup without the privity of the American Ambassador, Edward Korry, who was opposed to such intervention. This abortive attempt did not stop the CIA and its corporate allies: in September 1973, Allende was overthrown - and killed - and the dictatorship of General Pinochet installed. Among those who played an active influential role in the above were: Harold Geneen (Pres./Chm. of ITT); John McCone (Board of ITT, Director CIA 1961 to 1965, & member of Bohemian Club), and Donald Kendall (Chm. Pepsi Cola, Mem. Business Council, & friend of Nixon).

Neo-fascist organization and terrorist action in Italia

"Declassified secret service papers reveal that Ted Shackleton, deputy chief of the CIA station in Rome in the 1970's introduced the notorious Licio Gelli - head of the neo-fascist P2 masonic lodge and for years a fugitive in Argentina - to General Alexander Haig, then Nixon's chief of staff, and later, from 1974 to 79, Nato Supreme Commander. (William Scobie, Observer, 18/11/90).

Mr Brenneke alleged that President Bush, then director of the CIA, not only knew about these CIA activities in Italy (during the late 1970s and early 1980s) but was in fact one of the masterminds behind them. (Paddy Agnew, Irish Times, 24/7/90)

P-2 contribute to the strategy of tension that was pursued by right-wing extremists groups in Italy when the purpose was to destabilize Italian politics (in the 70-80). The P-2's support for Latin American Terror seems to have been in part a matter of internal Roman Catholic politics; an attempt to use right-wing death squads to eliminate the Church's liberation theologians and moderate Christian democrats.

Lieutenant Colonel William F. Buckley was directly connected to the work of the Chilean secret police, DINA. In September 1976, DINA agents assassinated former Chilean diplomat Orlando Letelier and his colleague, Ronni Moffitt, in Washington DC. (www.totse.com) James Addison Baker III

When George W. Bush and Al Gore took their 2000 election to overtime, the Bush crew called on Baker as their front man for the media. It was Baker's strategy to have the election decided in the U.S. Supreme Court, instead of through more traditional means such as counting the ballots. "The vote in Florida has been counted," Baker said, "and the vote in Florida has been recounted. Governor George W. Bush was the winner of the vote, and he was also the winner of the recount. Based on these results, we urge the Gore campaign to accept the finality of the election.

Reich was involved in a slew of questionable domestic activities connected to the Iran-Contra scandal. A 1987 government investigation concluded that Reich's "Office of Public Diplomacy" had "engaged in prohibited, covert propaganda activities," like writing and submitting fake letters to the op-ed pages of U.S. newspapers as if they were from Nicaraguan contra leaders. The Office, headed by Reich, was set up by President Reagan to sell the contras to the American public as freedom-fighters, and to counter domestic criticism of U.S. involvement in the Central American civil wars. Administrator of the Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation (WHISC)

Guatemala's death squads On Feb. 25, 1999, a Guatemalan truth commission issued a report on the staggering human rights crimes that Reagan and his administration had aided, abetted and concealed.

The Historical Clarification Commission, an independent human rights body, estimated that the Guatemalan conflict claimed the lives of some 200,000 people with the most savage bloodletting occurring in the 1980s. Based on a review of about 20 percent of the dead, the panel blamed the army for 93 percent of the killings and leftist guerrillas for three percent. Four percent were listed as unresolved.

Stay behind terrorism

The CIA and the British secret service MI6, in collaboration with the military alliance NATO and European military secret services set up a network of clandestine anticommunist armies in Western Europe after World War II. The secret soldiers were trained on remote islands in the Mediterranean and in unorthodox warfare centers in England and in the United States by the Green Berets and SAS Special Forces. Codenamed "Gladio" ('the sword'), the Italian secret army was exposed in 1990 by Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti to the Italian Senate, whereupon the press spoke of "The best kept, and most damaging, political-military secret since World War II" (Observer, 18. November 1990)

'Stay-behind' armies of NATO have also been discovered in France, Spain, Portugal, Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxemburg, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Switzerland, Austria, Greece and Turkey.

They were internationally coordinated by the Pentagon and NATO and had their last known meeting in the NATO-linked Allied Clandestine Committee (ACC) in Brussels in October 1990.

Operation Noble Eagle

On August 22, 2002, the Department of Defense and the National Guard Bureau in Washington, D.C. announced that the Iowa Army National Guard's 1st Battalion, 194th Field Artillery, was being ordered to federal active duty to locations within the United States for homeland security missions as part of Operation Noble Eagle II.

This constitutes an illegal operation on the part of the Bush junta in scrapping the Posse Comitatus Act of 1878. In a nutshell, this act bans the use of the military against American civilians.
